emotive interjections in british english a corpus based study on variation in acquisition function and usage constitutes the first in depth corpus based study on the use of emotive interjections in present day british english in a novel approach it systematically distinguishes between child and adult speakers providing new insights into how they use ow ouch ugh yuck whoops whoopsadaisy and wow in everyday spoken language it studies in detail their acquisition by children and pinpoints changes and developments in their use throughout early childhood the study highlights particularities displayed by child and adult speakers in general and identifies crucial differences regarding how adults use emotive interjections depending on whether they are interacting with children or other adults this book thus offers an exhaustive overview on the functions of emotive interjections based on thorough empirical research and will appeal to linguists concerned with pragmatics child language acquisition the expression of emotion and interjections first published in 1985 this book studies several common items in english conversation known variously as discourse particles interjections discourse markers and more informally hesitations or fillers while the analysis primarily focuses on like well and you know the larger concern is the entire set of items of which these are members and as such i mean now oh hey and aha are also examined these discourse particles are analysed at length and then a framework is proposed in which their use individually makes sense and allows revealing comparisons to be made between them this book will be of interest to students of linguistics there are few aspects of language which are more problematic than its discourse particles the present study of discourse particles draws upon data from the london lund corpus to show how the methods and tools of corpora can sharpen their description the first part of the book provides a picture of the state of the art in discourse particle studies and introduces the theory and methodology for the analysis in the second part of the book discourse particles are analysed as elements which have been grammaticalised and as a result have certain properties and uses the importance of linguistic and contextual cues such as text type position in the discourse prosody and collocation for analysing discourse particles is illustrated the following chapters deal with specific discourse particles now oh just sort of and that sort of thing actually on the basis of their empirical analysis in the london lund corpus examples and extended extracts from many different text types are provided to illustrate what discourse particles are doing in discourse nondescriptive meaning and reference extends wayne davis s groundbreaking work on the foundations of semantics davis revives the classical doctrine that meaning consists in the expression of ideas and advances the expression theory by showing how it can account for standard proper names and the distinctive way their meaning determines their reference he also shows how the theory can handle interjections syncategorematic terms conventional implicatures and other cases long seen as difficult for both ideational and referential theories the expression theory is founded on the fact that thoughts are event types with a constituent structure and that thinking is a fundamental propositional attitude distinct from belief and desire thought parts ideas or concepts are distinguished from both sensory images and conceptions word meaning is defined recursively sentences and other complex expressions mean what they do in virtue of what thought parts their component words express and what thought structure the linguistic structure expresses and unstructured words mean what they do in living languages in virtue of evolving conventions to use them to express ideas the difficulties of descriptivism show that the ideas expressed by names are atomic or basic the reference of a name is the extension of the idea it expresses which is determined not by causal relations but by its identity or content together with the nature of objects in the world hence a name's reference is dependent on but not identical to its meaning a name is directly and rigidly referential because the extension of the idea it expresses is not determined by the extensions of component ideas the expression theory thus has the strength of Fregeanism without its descriptivist bias and of Millianism without its referentialist or causalist shortcomings the referential properties of ideas can be set out recursively by providing a generative theory of ideas assigning extensions to atomic ideas and formulating rules whereby the semantic value of a complex idea is determined by the semantic values of its components Davis also shows how referential properties can be treated using situation semantics and possible worlds semantics the key is to drop the assumption that the values of intension functions are the referents of the words whose meaning they represent and to abandon the necessity of identity for logical modalities many other pillars of contemporary philosophical semantics such as the twin earth arguments are shown to be unfounded how do participants display affectivity in social interaction based on recordings of authentic everyday conversations and radio phone ins this study offers a fine grained analysis of how recipients of affect laden informings deploy sound objects i.e. interjections oh ooh and ah and paralinguistic signals whistle and clicks for responsive displays of affectivity examining the use of such sound objects across a number of interactional activities including news telling troubles talk complaining assessments and repair the study provides evidence that the sound pattern and sequential placement of sound objects systematically contribute to their specific meaning making in interaction i.e. the management of sequence organisation and interactional relevancies e.g. affiliation presenting an in depth analysis of a little researched area of language use from an interactional linguistic perspective the book will be of theoretical and methodological interest to an audience with a background in linguistics sociology and conversational studies this book constitutes the thoroughly refereed post conference proceedings of the COST Action 2102 and euognition supported international school on multimodal signals cognitive and algorithmic issues held in vietri sul mare italy in april 2008 the 34 revised full papers presented were carefully reviewed and selected from participants contributions and invited lectures given at the workshop the volume is organized in two parts the first on interactive and unsupervised multimodal systems contains 14 papers the papers deal with the theoretical and computational issue of defining algorithms programming languages and determinist models to recognize and synthesize multimodal signals these are facial and vocal expressions of emotions tones of voice gestures eye contact spatial arrangements patterns of touch expressive movements writing patterns and cultural differences in anticipation of the implementation of intelligent avatars and interactive dialogue systems that could be exploited to improve user access to future telecommunication services the second part of the volume on verbal and nonverbal communication signals presents 20 original studies devoted to the modeling of timing synchronisation between speech production gestures facial and head movements in human communicative expressions and on their mutual contribution for an effective communication
